WATER and CLIMATE: Everyone is getting mobilized to act fast!

COP16 - Marrakech - November 2016
In January 2016, INBO World General Assembly in Dakar had already given the alert to the fact that "freshwater would be one of the first victims of climate change", and proposed emergency measures to be taken urgently and limited on the need to increase upstream-downstream solidarity in the basins of all the rivers, lakes and aquifers of the world to face the numerous current challenges.

UNFCCC and INBO are coordinating a platform for pilot basins to test and promote the most effective measures to adapt to the climate change impacts on water resources, including, alongside usual infrastructure, the "Natural Water Retention Measures", leveraged with the support of the European Commission, and in a more general way the use of "green engineering" and the control of the water demand.

COP21 - Paris - December 2015
In 2015, this work led to the joint publication, by the United Nations and INBO, of a compendium of good practices and recommendations for quick action.

At the COP21 in Paris, 358 Organizations from the entire world signed the "Paris Pact" and committed themselves to take immediately applicable and "no regret" measures for water and adaptation in the basins.

INBO World General Assembly in Madrid in June 2016 mobilized the Basin Agencies of the whole world for adaptation to the climate.

The results of the first pilot projects were presented during the Official Water Day, co-facilitated by INBO at the COP22 in Marrakech, where the four Alliances for Basins, Municipalities, Business and Civil Societies coordinated among them the "Global Alliances for Water and Climate", to join their efforts for adaptation, enabled by all their partners and pass the technical knowledge needed.

The Alliances are already getting mobilized to support new projects and promote their results, especially at the "EUROPE-INBO 2017" Conference in Cadix in September, the "Water and Climate" Conference in Rome in October, the next COP23 in Bonn in November 2017 and at the World Water Forum of Brazil in March 2018.

It is time to move from words to action.
We have the means to succeed together!
